Description

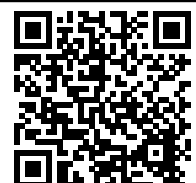

An unusual Daum Winter landscape jug with original stopper. Very beautiful and very finely detailed Art Nouveau cameo glass vase in an unusual jug or pitcher shape highlighted with enamel showing a Winter Woodland scene of Silver Birch trees highlighted with snow. The evening sunset effect created by the layer of yellow/orange glass gives the scene a dramatic effect. The winter landscape is one of the most sought after landscape decors and I have never seen this shape in a winter landscape design. The en grisaille technique is used to great effect in this vase to show the distant background of trees in the shadows and is exceptionally well detailed. The shape is very unusual and rare, particularly in landscape décor. The piece is signed to the body of the jug in black enamel - Daum Nancy and with the Cross of Lorraine. It was made in France c 1900. A vase with similar decoration is shown in Daum Frères: Maîtres Verriers, 1892-1935, by Katharina Büttiker-Weber, Zurich: Galerie Katharina Büttiker, 1986, cat. no 27. The Daum Glassworks was established in Nancy, France in 1875 and is still making glass today albeit of a very different style. The family were originally Lawyer...
