Description

This is a wonderful faded antique Ushak carpet with a gentle palette, ancient motifs a subtle design and exquisite colours. The dusky pink border colours sits beautifully with the off white tones in the centre, and faded greens in the background with pale blue dyes too. The design is delicate vines, leaves and central medallion. Woven in the late 19th Century in Anatolia, western Turkey, these exquisite hand-woven carpets have been produced since the start of the Ottoman period (1300-1922). The mid to late 19th century examples such as this became more open and decorative in design and were commissioned more for the Western market in the US and Europe and have since rivalled the look of the famous Ziegler carpets from Persia. The colour and look of Ushak carpets with muted dyes and softer designs really appeal to todays room schemes too. Easy to place in a room already decorated or to scheme with, fabrics can be chosen to work with a palette as subtle and beautiful as this carpet. If you would like to request a home visit to see this beautiful and rare pale antique Ushak carpet at home, it would be our pleasure to help you soon. We love to travel nationwide, havin...
