Description

We are delighted to offer this magnificent 18ct gold garnet bracelet made in the early Victorian period c.1840. This beautiful floral-themed bracelet is made from high-carat gold (18ct+ tested). It presents a gorgeous and majestic design featuring multiple foliate scrolls and floral links joining 6 garnet cabochons and one larger central garnet with a locket on the rear. Owing to the round cabochons, this bracelet is especially stunning under natural sunlight whereby the different reflections and angles of the garnets along your wrist present a delightful lustre. Furthermore, the curvature of the gem's surface creates wonderful reflections even in low lighting such as at late-night events, parties or even candlelight. In addition to its classical elegance and distinguished Victorian flair, we believe that such timeless pieces can be surprisingly complimentary to modern style and design. Wearing this piece with a flowery blouse in the summer or a darker-tone jumper in the winter may be an unexpected yet surprisingly delightful sartorial juxtaposition. A conversation starter and a delightful addition whether be it a gift for a lucky individual or for yourself...
