Description

A classic model, and rarer executed in brass. Lesser grates in a broadly similar style are frequently attributed to Thomas Jeckyll, but there really is no comparison (both E.W Godwin and Christopher Dresser advocated their use). Condition: Brass being softer than the cast iron equivalent, the sides are slightly mis-shapen and there are one or two minor and isolated dents to the edges. Aperture- 63.5cm high x 46.5cm wide. Reliable transport can be easily throughout the UK at cost price. Please let me know if you would like a quote, or have any other questions. Follow us on Instagram: jeckyllandco
