Description

An interesting 17th century centre table with reused timber. An ovolo moulded two piece top on edge moulded rails with baluster turned legs and a peripheral stretcher. When this table was made in the late 17th century another item was repurposed. See the inside of the end rails showing carved details and rebates in the stretchers. Possibly a child's table as it is lower than typical examples, would make a good coffee table. Excellent colour and surface.
