Description

Herbert Thomas Dicksee was a British painter born in 1862. He was best known for his sensitive depictions of animals including dogs, lions and tigers. Dicksee's family was well-ingrained into the art world; his father was an artist and his nephew, Sir Frank Dicksee, was the president of the Royal Academy in London from 1924–1928. Herbert went on to study at the Slade School of Art in London on a scholarship, and his first painting was exhibited in 1881. Many of Dicksee's most famous works were transcribed into prints and etchings published by Clackner of London. He died on February 20, 1942 in Hampstead, England. "Where's Master?" shows Caesar, the favorite terrier belonging to King Edward VII. This is the 1st state Artist's proof etching on vellum measuring 16"x 24". It is framed in the nice original oak frame giving an overall size of 25"x 34".
