Description

This 19th-century watercolour by British artist James George Philp (1816-1885) depicts a tranquil view on the River Derwent in Derbyshire. Meandering between craggy tree-lined banks, the enchanting Derwent shimmers amid Summertime bliss. A bright channel of near white offset by the darker tones of abundant reflected foliage. On the right, two young friends rest upon the rocks, with trousers rolled up ahead of dangling legs. Philp admired the effects of light on water and spent countless hours studying its radiant displays. Living predominantly in Falmouth, Cornwall, he was raised by the sea and afforded ample opportunity to study from nature. Here, working in picturesque Derbyshire, it's no surprise that he's selected a view of an elegant river. Once again turning his brush to the scenic delights of Britain's silvery waterways. Signed lower right and held within a gilt frame. Medium: Watercolour on paper Overall size: 29½" x 22½" / 75cm x 57cm Year of creation: c. 1870 Labels & Inscriptions: Label on the reverse with title.
