Description

This antique Mahal carpet from the Sultanabad region of West Persia has very attractive cheerful colours with a repeating Herati design which is spaced nicely and is very easy on the eye. The terracotta background in the field, the greens and yellows are all very attractive. But it is the light blue border which sets this carpet apart, and makes it so decorative. One can imagine it working in many types of settings. The weave is fine and the pile is thin which makes the design crisper and more elegant. Dating to around 1880, it is in generally good condition with minor signs of use and wear that give it the elusive lived in look. A very decorative carpet.
