Description

This delightful rug comes from the Karabagh region of the Caucasus and dates to around 1900. The repeating field design of stylised roses on an abrashed ruby red field is known as the Gol Farang or 'Foreign Flower' design and is a design that has been influenced by European decorative styles, in particular French decorative taste which influenced the Russian aristocracy and military. Note the little male figure in shorts which adds to the charm. Could it be his garden? Drawn in cheerful colours with fine silky wool, it is framed by an equally charming floral border on a black ground which creates a painterly three-dimensional impression. This rug is an excellent size which would make an impact in many situations. Generally good condition. Kilim ends and sides original and intact. Professionally cleaned.
