Description

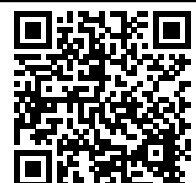

Very close to matching, a near pair of circa 1840 armchairs. Possibly of Irish origin and made by the same maker with exposed mahogany to the arms, front frieze and cabriole legs. The button backed upholstery is over 60 years old and as such has some imperfections but could be used as is. The photos show the condition well. One button is missing but almost impossible to see. The two differ slightly in width and arm scroll design. Both have differing castors. The differences are hard to distinguish when the chairs are apart from each other. An unusual design which is attractive and would suit a large grand room or hall. Both are 90 cm high Overall widths are 69 cm and 73 cm Both are about 78 cm in depth Seat widths between the arms are 55 and 58 cm. FREE UK SHIPPING. OVERSEAS buyers please ask for shipping costs before purchasing.
