Description

We are delighted to offer this sweet 18ct gold Victorian brooch made c.1880. This brooch features a lovely intertwined circular design with the central flower bud being mounted with a garnet cabochon. The gold workmanship on this brooch is particularly delightful - despite the relatively small size and area to work with, each section has been embellished with filigree-like rope twist rings and borders. Furthermore, the manner in which the half-torus-shaped mount seamlessly blends into the other parts forming an aesthetically pleasing proportion is beautiful in terms of geometric design. Understated in size yet distinctly elegant; we believe such brooches are not only collectable antiques but an excellent accoutrement to your wardrobe. When paired with shirts, jumpers or coats this brooch would make for a wonderful conversation starter and an opportunity to share your passion of antiques. The reverse side of the brooch features a c-clasp pin. The brooch is unmarked as is common with pieces of the period however we have tested it for 18ct+ high-carat gold. Please note the pin is not made of solid gold. All of our jewellery come with a complimentary har...
