This is a good quality antique English George V round oak table, with a revolving / metamorphic drop-leaf mechanism, circa 1920, in excellent original condition. The oak tripod table is constructed with a circular top, with three drop-leaf sections, decorated with 17th century style carvings. The top can be set to either have the leaves raised or lowered, simply by turning the whole top through 45 degrees. The top retains the original rotating mechanism. Below, is a straight, scribe moulded frieze, connected to barley twist legs, which features geometric carved blocks to the top and bottom. Towards the bottom of the oak table,...
