Description

A copper tray with a good patina with the initials S.W.R. which stand for South Western Railway and the number 1 which implies first class. This tray would have been used late 19th and early 20th Century in one of the dining cars. The tray has a couple of dents as you might expect from being well used. The width measurement below does not include the handles. That measurement would be 41cm. We can deliver free of charge in UK mainland and can calculate the cost for international delivery.
