Description

This early 20th-century oil painting by British artist Benjamin Williams Leader RA (1831-1923) depicts a bright coastal view with sand dunes. As a light breeze drifts across the shifting dunes, he stands to sketch the breakers. The tide retreating under a sky abundant with passing clouds. In the distance, via a patch of incandescent reflections, the undulant coastline fades into a blueish haze. The joy of a lazy Summer on the tranquil British coast captured by a masterful hand. Leader often sojourned to the sandy beaches of Wales and South-West England - seemingly captivated by these sun-drenched environments. Intriguing, many of his coastal works are devoid of all activity with figures only included on occasion. So perhaps he ventured here in search of peace and solitude. Signed in the lower left and held within a beautiful gilt frame, which is probably original. Medium: Oil on canvas Overall size: 25" x 19" / 64cm x 48cm Year of creation: c. 1900 Condition: Artwork presents well. Fine craquelure but the paint is stable. Frame with some light wear.
